The other image editing programs In recent years, Mac OS X's default image editor has come to be iPhoto, Apple's own photo-editing program. Apple has made a little attempt to mix all the various programs in the Apple iLife suite of programs. However, they actually designed it with two separate purposes in mind. On the one hand, the editing is fairly simple. On the other hand, it is meant to be an all-in-one multimedia organizer. The emphasis is more on organizing and transferring photos. Nevertheless, iPhoto is easy to use and it provides some excellent tutorials. If you have a Mac, you can use the iPhoto album view (shown in Figure 1-7) as a thumbnail view to see your photos in such a way that makes it easy to find the photo you need for editing and, in turn, organizing your photos. If your default photo-editing program is Photoshop, you can take advantage of iPhoto's cover flow function to move around your photos.

Tennis -Wimbledon: Davenport and Scuderi to watch out for Posted: May 17, 2018 10:46 am The match to watch out for is not featuring Venus Williams and Serena Williams, but Andy Murray and his opponent Kyle Edmund. The world No. 4 British star is aiming to claim his ninth Wimbledon title, after 12 years of success, and the two-time champion Edmund is a match for him. It will be the first title race between the two British tennis players since 2010, when Murray lost to Andy Murray in the fifth and deciding set. Murray is the only one of the Williams siblings to have won Wimbledon, having defeated his sister Venus Williams in the final in 2011. A total of 22 Grand Slam titles have been won by a player whose surname was Williams, including two by Serena Williams, two each by Venus and Serena, and four each by brothers Richard and Donald, who were Lionel and Michael. Richard and Donald are also the last players to have won three consecutive Wimbledon doubles titles, in 1968-70. The present invention relates generally to semiconductor packaging and, more specifically, to a chip scale package formed by a flip-chip bonding process. Flip-chip technology is a widely used approach to interconnecting an integrated circuit (IC) to other devices, e.g. a chip on wafer or a printed wiring board (PWB). The face of the chip to which other devices are to be connected is commonly referred to as the "active side" of the chip. To interconnect the chip to other devices, the flip-chip is typically connected to a substrate, for example, a chip on wafer or PWB, by means of a plurality of solder joints, typically placed on solder pads on the active side of the chip. A flip-chip is typically formed by placing a chip face down on a substrate followed by re-flowing the solder bumps (balls) connecting the chip to the substrate. During the re-flow process, the solder bumps reflow from an initial molten state to a hardened solder state. A flux material is typically applied to the solder pads on the chip and/or the substrate for surface cleaning and to encourage wetting by the solder. The solder bumps are then placed on solder pads on the substrate and the chip is flipped to allow the solder bumps to reach and contact solder pads on the substrate. The

1. Field of the Invention This invention relates to an automotive vehicle, more particularly to an automotive vehicle in which an engine is disposed laterally of a cabin. 2. Description of the Related Art In an automotive vehicle, the disposition of an engine is not unimportant. In most cases, it is advantageous to dispose an engine so as to extend rearwardly of the cabin, since a long space is available rearwardly of the cabin. However, the problem of undesirable movement of the engine relative to the cabin during a collision of the vehicle is encountered. Conventionally, a lateral engine has been disposed at a rearward position so as to provide space for passengers and cargo in the cabin. In such a case, the engine is fixed at a specified position relative to the cabin, thereby obviating the problem of engine movement during a collision. Such a lateral engine is more frequently used on small vehicles and pickup trucks than on large automotive vehicles, because the space is significantly restricted rearwardly of a cabin in such large vehicles. However, in the case of a large automotive vehicle such as a pickup truck, cargo space rearwardly of the cabin is not so large that the cargo can be sufficiently protected by a lateral engine. In addition, it is more difficult to set the engine so as to extend rearwardly of the cabin in a large automotive vehicle, because the space is smaller, the cabin rear portion is narrower, and the space for mounting the engine is limited. In particular, in the case of a vertically slidable engine, when the engine is moved to a stowed position, clearance must be provided between the engine and an engine compartment wall, and an obstacle must be removed from a space for mounting the engine. In such a case, the space rearwardly of the cabin must be made as narrow as possible in order to provide an unobstructed room for the engine mounting clearance and the space for mounting the engine. 2017–18 Marist Red Foxes men's basketball team The 2017–18 Marist Red Foxes men's basketball team represented Marist College during the 2017–18 NCAA Division I men's basketball season. The Red Foxes, led by first-year head coach Andy Enfield, played their home games at the McCann Center in New York City, New York as members of the Metro Atlantic Athletic Conference. They finished the season 13–18, 7–11 in MAAC play to finish in a three-way tie for ninth place. As the No. 9 seed
