Q: How to use DTO in the same project as the original model in asp.net mvc I have a asp.net mvc project that communicates with an Oracle database. I've created a DTO in my project and it's up to me to map it to the database that my project is using. Currently I have a method in the controller that can accept both a full object and a DTO that can be populated with its constructor and used to pass the entity from the controller to the repository. However, I would like to have the repository (of the Oracle database) to map the DTO to the object that I need to have stored and then use the repository that the mvc project uses to send the data to the database, as opposed to mapping the DTO to the object directly in the repository and doing the mapping in the controller. Is this at all possible? Edit: Here is a bit more of the code in question public ActionResult GetEmployeeData(EmployeeRequestDTO request) { using(EmployeeEntityDataModelManagerFactory factory = new EmployeeEntityDataModelManagerFactory(db)) { if(request.IsFulfilled) { using(OracleDataModelManager manager = new OracleDataModelManager(db)) { IEnumerable employeeList = manager.GetList(request.UserName, request.ProjectID); List dtos = new

List(); foreach(EmployeeModel employee in employeeList) { EmployeeDTO employeeDTO = new EmployeeDTO( employee ); dtos.Add( employeeDTO );
```
